

Who are we?

Written by Administrator

Thursday, 15 April 2010 21:10 - Last Updated Thursday, 16 August 2012 14:19

We have been 'harvesting' the sun since 1995 and we feel fortunate to have made the decision then to lead a solar life. The benefits have been personal, spiritual and financial. Our investment has been paid back and our lives are more than comfortable in the ever-changing weather of coastal Maine.

Debbi was a music major at the University Maryland and then received her masters degree from Boston University. I was a communications major at Boston University and went on to receive my masters degree from the University of Pennsylvania.

Each morning we wake up looking for the sun. We are 'solar groundhogs' but in our case we are pleased to see our shadows because it means free energy to power and heat our home.

As a journalist, I try not to be guilty of hyperbole. All statements are true - perhaps difficult to believe, but true - a solar house in Maine sustaining itself more than a decade and a half.

Questions are invited...just send us an email.